The Cotton Markets.

NEW YORK COTTON MARKET.

New York, March 23.—The market for cotton futures made a steady start at an advance of 164 points, cabbes being quite as good as expected; receipts moderate, and more or less general rains reported for the eastern section of the cotton belt recently. Covering for a time was quite active, and there was also some pretty good investment buying. The English contingent bought the summer months; but later sold the new crop positions quite freely, which gave a weak relation to the remote deliveries. During the forenoon the South contributed to the firmness by sending liberal buying orders. Later, however, the market turned easier under a realizing movement partly accounted for by more favorable forecasts regarding the weather, a disposition to increase estimates as to receipts, and partly on a bearish turn to gossip respecting the question of acreage. By noon the market had returned to about yosterday's closing prices, having at the favorable forecasts regarding the weather, a disposition to increase estimates as to receipts, and partly on a bearish turn to gossip respecting the question of acreage, By noon the market bad returned to about yosterday's closing prices, having at the form of the contributed to the firmness by sending the weather, a disposition to increase estimates as to receipts, and partly on a bearish turn to gossip respectively.
